#Read the following passage then answer:

You may have often heard the term carbon footprint in recent years. But what is it and does everyone have one? A carbon footprint is the total amount of greenhouse gases created as a result of an individual's activities. You might be thinking, "But I don't do anything that creates greenhouse gases!" Well, firstly, greenhouse gases, such as carbon dioxide and methane, are emitted into the air by burning fossil fuels. You might not be doing this personally on a daily basis, but all of the things you use, such as transportation and electricity, and all the things you buy, like food and clothes, require energy to work or be made. And what are still the most used energy sources on the planet? They are oil, coal, and gas. All of these are fossil fuels that need to be burned to release the energy that powers the vehicles we use to get around and the electrical equipment in our homes and workplaces and to grow, harvest, package, ship, and even cook the things that we buy. Therefore, individuals are encouraged to travel less by plane and car, unplug electrical items when not in use, and buy local produce.

The average annual carbon footprint is calculated to be about 7 tonnes per person, but surveys estimate that rises to 16 tonnes for an American citizen.

However, although we should all do what we can to reduce our own carbon footprints, remember that the first household carbon footprint calculators were designed by an oil producer. Critics have said they did this to shift the blame for climate-damaging pollution from big corporations to individuals' lifestyle choices. Ironically, it is companies like these that have built a society where carbon emissions are practically unavoidable.
